Across The President's Desk

PA Angus Association Members,

Greetings to you all of you on a cold rainy spring day here at Valley Meadow Farm! If April showers bring May flowers, what does a cold rain with a few snowflakes bring in early May? I for one, am hoping it brings lots of green grass and a great first cutting of hay in the weeks to come!

For those of you done calving, I hope it went well and the calves are enjoying some green grass and sunshine in between the rains. If you are still calving, best wishes as you start to see the results of your breeding decisions last summer. I got to see many of you at the PA Bull test facility last month for the bull sale and the PA Finest Female Sale. What a great time to be in the cattle business; it was evident that many people were looking to invest in good angus genetics with bull and females both selling well!

The PA Angus Breeders Show is right around the corner, and we are looking forward to having our annual business meeting and election of officers during the breeders show at our banquet Friday, June 16th at 5:30 pm. Please be sure to get your reservations in and enjoy a great meal while connecting with fellow Angus breeders from across the State.

By now most of you are aware that our PA Juniors will be hosting the Eastern Regional Junior Angus Show at the Farm Show building in June of 2024. The juniors and advisors have been working to establish committees and are in the planning stages to make sure we have a great show. As an association we are here to support the juniors and I am sure they will be reaching out to many of you for help and guidance as they go through the organizational process, please consider getting involved and being a part of this great event! I know the juniors will be rolling out some fundraisers and will give us an update at the Breeders show next month, the ERJAS is only 13 months away!

Please have a great May and I look forward to seeing you all in June!

Best Regards,
Scott Brown

2024 Eastern Regional Junior Angus Show Planning is Underway

If you haven't already heard, Pennsylvania will be hosting the 2024 Eastern Regional Junior Angus Show (ERJAS) in Harrisburg, PA. The ERJAS will be held June 6-9, 2024 at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex. The ERJAS theme will be "The Sweetest Show on Earth".

James Voight, PJAA President, reported just recently in the March newsletter that the junior chairs are Kierson Reasner, Lee Sweitzer, and James Voight. The adult chairs are Daniel Rohrbaugh, Kaitlin Bell, and Madison Weaver. There are still many committees, though, that need both Junior and Adult Chairs to assist with the planning and execution of show. They are:

Fundraising: Junior and Adult

Opening Ceremonies: Junior

Promotion: Adult

Show Office: Junior and Adult

Food and Meals: Junior and Adult

Jr Social: Junior and Adult

Gifts and Awards: Adult

Education: Junior and Adult

Trade Show: Junior and Adult

Hospitality: Adult

If you're interested in being a Chair for one of the committees or even just volunteering with the show, please contact one of the Junior or Adult Chairs. Planning one of these shows takes a Team and the juniors would certainly appreciate your help. The juniors are excited to continue preparations for the ERJAS and to begin working on their committees!

Replacement Heifers: Management Options To Insure Success

Ben Williamson, Penn State University Instructor of Animal Science

Management strategies to insure replacement heifers have the best opportunity to succeed in production.

As we transition into summer, our to-do list seems never-ending. If the spring continues to stay wet and cold, we may still be trying to plant and start making hay at the same time. With all of that weighing on our minds, we still can't forget about planning ahead and making a strategy for the breeding season. Reproduction is the most influential factor contributing to the profitability of a cow-calf producer. If for some reason we have poor conception rates, the annual revenue of the operation will drastically decrease likely inhibiting profitability. While there are several reasons that contribute to this happening, we need to manage our risk to ensure that we give our cows an opportunity to be successful.

Replacement heifers and first-calf heifers are among the most difficult to manage, as they have greater nutritional and management needs. The first thing to remember is that cows are long term investments, and the cow usually has to wean 6 calves before she pays for herself and begins generating a profit. Often this group gets blended in with the mature cows, and as a result, they may not get the feed and attention they need to ensure that they are around for a long enough period of time to become profitable. These groups benefit a great deal when separated so that they are not competing with mature cows for feed, and so that you may supply them with better quality forage that is too expensive to feed mature cows.

Traditional margins require heifers to calve at 2 years of age; otherwise, they usually do not recapture the financial investment placed in them. In order for this to take place, they need to be bred by 15 months of age and reach puberty between 12 and 14 months of age. Animal's ability to reach puberty is partly due to age and genetics, but more dependent on their plain of nutrition. As a result, we have typically recommended that heifers be bred when they reach 65% of their mature body weight. You can estimate mature weight by surveying the cow herd from which the heifer derived. If the cows are an average weight of 1,200 pounds, then it is probably a fair assumption that the heifers will be that size when they reach maturity. That will require the heifers to average 780 pounds at breeding.

It is important to realize that there is a great deal of opportunity for error in this group, so we need to manage heifers to the best of our ability. One possible opportunity to decrease the age in which puberty is reached is to utilize ionophores. Research has shown that by including ionophores in the diet of developing heifers, it will slightly decrease the age in which heifers reach puberty. This is especially true when feed resources are limited or marginal. It is important to remember that this does not replace the need for a good plain of nutrition, just helps to better utilize feed resources for positive results.

Typically, the hardest group to breed is 2-year-old first-calf heifers. This may be referred to as the "sophomore slump," as they are heifers that are still growing, raising a calf, and are being asked to re-breed. In order for cattle to have a calf every 365 days, they need to re-breed ~ 80 days post-partum. Usually, these groups of "sophomores" need an additional 2 to 3 weeks post-partum to begin cycling than mature cows due to their added stress and nutritional needs. To help ensure that they do not conceive late in the breeding season or fail to breed, it may be a good idea to breed your yearling heifers 2 to 3 weeks before the cows to help compensate for this additional stress. This may be placed where synchronization can help. By incorporating a synchronization protocol that allows more heifers to be bred at the beginning of the breeding season, it ensures that they have more time to begin cycling after their first calf. There are additional benefits to using this management strategy as well. If heifers have not yet reached puberty, a synchronization protocol that utilizes progesterone may prompt them to begin cycling. Additionally, this option may allow you to utilize artificial insemination to ensure that your heifers are bred to proven calving ease sires. Cows that calve at the beginning of the calving season are more likely to continue to calve at the beginning of the season. In turn, they will have older calves that will weigh more at weaning, increasing your revenue. This is also a great group to select replacements from as they are the oldest heifers in the group and should be heavier and reach puberty earlier than their younger contemporaries. Cows that calve in the first 21 days of the calving season tend to remain in the herd longer, and their daughters tend to conceive earlier as well giving you more confidence in your replacements. As you can see, utilizing a few simple technologies can have multiple positive effects on your operation's productivity and bottom line.

For more information, please consult your extension educator for additional resources and insight on how to implement practices that best suit your operation and goals.

The Breeders Show takes a lot of money to operate. It also takes a lot of volunteers. We hope you will consider contributing to ensure the continued success of the show. We have many new members who may not understand the total picture regarding the financing of this show. While we receive some funding from the State, money also comes from entry fees and some from the generous contributions of our members. Sponsorships are available in the categories listed above. Please consider where you can help. You will be recognized throughout the three-day event!

All Sponsors Receive Recognition in The Show Catalog and Newsletters; Recognition Banner in The Show Ring ($100 Or More); Pictures Taken with

During the 2023 annual meeting the 2022 state awards will be given to Outstanding Junior Boy and Girl members, Family of the Year, Breeder of the Year, Stewardship Award, and Promoter of the Year. I would encourage you to attend this year for an amazing dinner and fellowship with friends and fellow Angus breeders.

Please register for the Annual Meeting and dinner by 6/1/2023 by going to WWW.SHOWMAN.APP or by emailing Chris Jeffcoat at paangussecretary@gmail.com. Payment can be made through the Showman App website or if emailing Chris, please bring a check to the Annual Meeting.
